

A B S T R A C T

The present invention relates to network traffic improvements and proposes a mechanism for server-side performance optimization which is based on conditional in-advance content delivery to browsers associated with content requesting end-users, whereby the condition is determined preferably by evaluating the current load of the content server. One or a pair of dedicated server computer systems may contribute to that.

F09299"44.03304